$2 Million in Benefits Provided By Salvation Army, Report Shows

Upwards of $2,000,000 in welfare and public service by five self-sustaining institutions of The Salvation Army was given to people in Los Angeles county last year at no cash cost to local citizens. Salvation Army officials reported this week.

The report coincided with the annual "salvage month" observances in which Men's Social Service institutions of The Salvation Army at Los Angeles, Pasadena, Van Nuys, Long Beach and Santa Monica are offering top speed service to the housewives of the area in assisting with spring cleanup chores.

APPROXIMATELY 100 2-way radio-equipped red shield Salvation Army trucks are available to collect salvagable articles of wearing apparel, furniture, appliances, rags and miscellaneous throw-aways which then become commodities which provide work opportunities for beneficiaries under the program.

During the 12-month period, 2,481 men were admitted for residence care and a total of 10,108 men received other services through the five institutions. The men admitted to the program were physically or socially handicapped, the report states.

OF THESE, 1056 men were sent back into the labor markets of the area as having been "permanently rehabilitated."

Major Arthur Carl, manager of the Men's Social service institution serving Torrance explained that the handicapped men fall into various categories. Some of the men are victims of alcoholism; others have recently been discharged from hospitals, or have recently recovered from serious illness but are not able to occupy full-time jobs; others are handicapped because of maladjustment or because of psychological difficulties.

The Salvation Army's counseling services include social, physical, spiritual and psychological.

"EACH MAN'S problems are studied from the standpoint of the total individual and his needs, and not only with relationship to his immediate situation," the Salvationist leader stated.

During the year, 497,145 meals were served and 150,859 lodgings were provided at a cost of $313,517 and gratuities in the amount of $754,410 were given to the men to assist them in working out their own rehabilitation, he said.

MORE THAN 3,000 men received medical attention beyond the intake examination and periodical checkups.

The Salvation Army operates social service institutions for men at Seventh and Towne streets in Los Angeles; 1370 Alamitos in Long Beach; 34 North DeLacy Ave. at Colorado St., in Pasadena; 6059 Van Nuys Blvd. in the San Fernando Valley and 1658 Eleventh St. in Santa Monica.

Housewives in this area having an accumulation of salvagable articles of furniture, wearing apparel, shoes, bedding, appliances, rags or similar articles are invited to telephone for The Salvation Army red shield pickup truck at HEmlock 7-1293.
